Blaine Countians arrested in Gooding double murder

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

GOODING - Gooding County authorities arraigned two Blaine County men Friday in the double murder of a Gooding couple in mid-September.

"A.J." Robert Johnson, 24, and Thomas Peterson, 24, were arraigned shortly after 11:30 Friday afternoon, said Gooding County Prosecuting Attorney Phil Brown.

Each man was charged with two counts of first-degree murder, as well as robbery, burglary and rape, Brown said. A preliminary hearing was set for Oct. 22 at 9:30 a.m.

Brown signed the arrest warrants Thursday evening, and the two men, who were being held in the Blaine County Jail on unrelated charges, were picked up by Gooding County authorities Friday morning.

The bodies of Ricky Lee Mangum, 33, and Connie Marie Allen, 31, were found naked Sept. 15 in their home five miles northwest of Gooding. Their throats were slashed.

In Friday's arraignment, Johnson and Peterson were charged with raping Allen, Brown said.

Johnson and Peterson were arrested on burglary charges in Blaine County last spring. They were released on bond, but were jailed recently on charges of violating terms of the bond.

The two were not supposed to leave Blaine County or have contact with each other while out on bond.

The Times-News learned the week of Sept. 20 that Johnson and Peterson had been questioned in the killings. The day after the newspaper published a story naming the men, Gooding County Sheriff Jim Jax said the two had admitted being at the scene the night of the murder.

Jax has refused to release information on the investigation since he confirmed that Johnson and Peterson were questioned. He was "unavailable" for comment Friday evening.

Gooding County Public Defender Severin Swenson Jr. said Friday he will represent Peterson.

Hailey attorney Kathleen Rivers, who represented Johnson on the burglary charges in Blaine County, said Friday that her law partner, Keith Roark, will represent Johnson.

Roark, a former Blaine County Prosecutor, now serves as mayor of Hailey.

Gooding attorney Craig Hobday said Friday that he also is considering defending Johnson.

Under Idaho law, the maximum penalty for first-degree murder is death.

Yours for $1.98 million

This is Carver's, Nev., a hamlet located at a bend on State Route 376, as it appeared on Sept. 30.

For sale: Nevada town, gold mine

The Associated Press

CARVER'S, Nev. - Nearly half a century ago, a roadside truck stop opened on a lonely stretch of gravel road in the Big Smokey Valley of central Nevada.

It was called Carver's, after proprietors Jean and Gerald Carver, and over the years a mini-mall, laundry, motel, and car wash sprang up. And later a gold mine opened.

A little more than 20 years ago, the state recognized the crook in the road with a dot on the map. And now, the whole kit and caboodle is for sale at an asking price of $1.98 million.

The truck stop is now a seven-table cafe and bar, boasting slot machines and the town's only blackjack table. Greg and Sue Scott own it and put a convenience store, deli, the car wash and the laundry across the street.

All those businesses are part of the deal, as is a 200-acre gold mine co-owned by real estate agent Bill Kohlmoos, 35 miles southwest of town, and the Jumping Jack Motel, owned by Kenny Berg and his wife, Bobbie.

The businesses also might be sold off individually.

"I don't particularly want to (sell), but I would," Scott said. "They thought it would be more impressive to sell the whole town."

Berg said he's looking forward to some uninterrupted sleep.

"We're just a little bit burned out on the bell ringing in the middle of the night," he said.

Jean Carver, now Jean Carver Duhme, supports the sale: "I think it's marvelous. If everybody wants to take it easy and loaf, it's a good idea. I like it."

She first came to the valley, about 230 miles southeast of Reno, with her first husband in 1943.

"I fell in love with this valley the minute I saw it," she said, recalling unobstructed mountain views, a few ranches and endless sagebrush.

When the state began surveying for a highway in 1947, "I decided I wanted a restaurant on that highway when they put it in," said Duhme, 78.

So the couple traded $100 worth of hay for an old building and hauled it from Round Mountain. With the purchase of another old building for $50, they were in business.

She continued to operate the truck stop after her husband died and sold it in 1976 to her son, Gary, who later sold it to the Scotts. About 300 people live in the town now.

Even those who want to sell will probably remain in the valley. They don't have dreams of big city life. They just want to do something else.

"I'm not so sure we'd go anywhere," said Sue Scott. "It's a very special valley. I feel we're out here for a purpose. I just don't know what it is yet."

Fallen U.S. soldier 'kept his eye on the prize'

The Associated Press

CHICAGO - Just weeks ago, Sgt. Eugene Williams wrote his parents about the hellish war he saw in Somalia: people with no money for food but tons of costly weapons. He wondered why. He never got his answer.

On Friday, family and friends said goodbye to the gentle 26-year-old Army sergeant who loved to fly and lived to wear a soldier's uniform. He died in one - along with two other soldiers - when a Somali-launched rocket-propelled grenade shot down their helicopter Sept. 25 over Mogadishu.

"He kept his eye on the prize and the prize was to be a soldier," said the Rev. Thomas Jackson, Williams' longtime pastor. "When he made it, he was so happy."

"He was dedicated," said Johnnie Williams, his 48-year-old father. "It's not a consolation, but one thing that makes me feel better is he did some things that he wanted to do. The Army was his choice."

As a public anxiety grows, more U.S. soldiers are killed and more troops are sent to Somalia, one family grieves and ponders how a humanitarian mission on foreign soil has turned into horror and heartbreak for them back home.

"You can't do anything to bring a life back," Williams' mother, Georgia, said plaintively. "But are we accomplishing anything? If we're not going to get the job done without losing so many lives, why continue?"

Eugene Williams had avoided a different kind of danger growing up on the crime-infested West Side, where success often isn't measured in dollars but in how far and how fast you can get away from the streets.

Gene, his friends called him, was always a straight arrow.

"He wasn't a rowdy kid," his mother recalled of her second eldest of four. "We taught him not to start any confrontations and if at all possible to

Somalis ridiculed captive American

The Associated Press

NAIROBI, Kenya - Angry Somalis tore off a captured American pilot's clothes and dragged him through Mogadishu streets for ridicule, a report of an interview with the pilot said Friday.

A Red Cross official met with Chief Warrant Officer Michael Durant privately Friday at an undisclosed location in Mogadishu, and carried back a letter from Durant to his family, said Tony Burgener, a spokesman for the International Red Cross in Geneva.

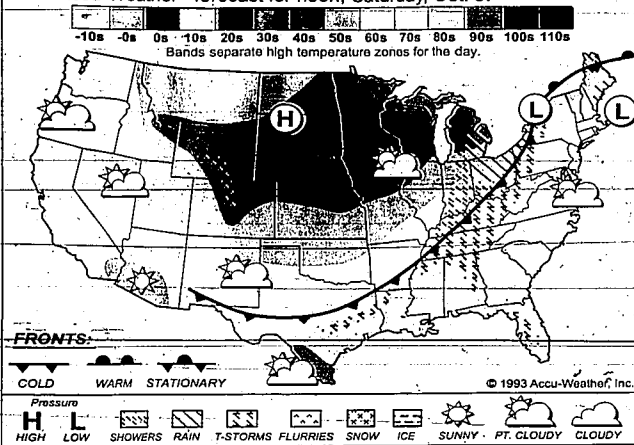

The Red Cross was bound by its own rules not to release details about such visits. But a reporter from Britain's The Guardian newspaper interviewed Durant for a story published in the paper's Saturday edition.

Snow sweeps from Northern Rockies onto Plains

The Associated Press

An early snowstorm dumped as much as 7 inches of snow on the northern Rockies and northwestern Plains Friday while rain was scattered from the Great Lakes along the Mississippi Valley and the Southeast.

The leading edge of a mass of cold air extended into the upper Mississippi Valley and Great Lakes.

A storm system over the Rockies produced snow during the day from sections of the north-central Rockies onto the Plains and into the Black Hills of western South Dakota.

Up to a foot of snow was possible at higher elevations of Wyoming and up to 6 inches was possible in the Black Hills, the National Weather Service said.

More than 7 inches of snow fell Thursday night and Friday morning at Billings, Mont., and the heavy, wet accumulation snapped tree limbs that fell on power lines.

A tour bus carrying Canadian senior citizens crashed on icy Interstate 15 in Montana between Helena and Great Falls early in the morning. Several people were taken to hospitals in ambulances, but authorities reported most injuries did not appear to be serious.

Snowfall by midday in Wyoming included 5 to 7 inches at Cody, around 5 inches at Sheridan and 3 inches at Buffalo.

In South Dakota, 4 inches was reported on the ground at Edgemont, with 2 inches at DeSmet, and roads were snow-covered and icy. In the Nebraska Panhandle, 2 inches of snow was reported in some sections with around an inch at Scottsbluff and Alliance.

Snow also fell in the mountains of Colorado.

In South Dakota, the snow was accompanied by gusty north winds and temperatures in the 20s. Just the day before, Sioux Falls, in southeastern South Dakota had a high of 83.

Elsewhere, thunderstorms developed during the afternoon along a cold front extending from the eastern Gulf of Mexico across the Florida Peninsula.

Weather summary

A low pressure system was spreading moist and unstable air over Idaho Friday, the National Weather Service said.

Elko County - Today a slight chance of afternoon showers northeast, otherwise, partly cloudy. Highs mid-50s to upper 60s. Tonight partly cloudy. Lows mid-20s to lower 40s. Sunday partly cloudy with highs lower 60s to lower 70s.

Scattered showers continued over the state. Amounts Friday varied from trace amounts to near a half inch. Idaho Falls reported .50 inch and Grangeville received .45 inch. Light rain dampened the Magic Valley during the late morning, but the clouds began dissipating during the afternoon.

Winds remained light much of the day.

The highest temperature in the state Friday was 64 degrees at Lewiston. Spencer reported the lowest at 29 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 97 degrees at Laredo, Texas. Minot, N.D., reported the lowest temperature at 19 degrees.

"I saw people coming out of tin shacks trying to get to us. I kept shooting at them, but then ran out of ammunition," that story quoted Durant as saying.

It said Somali pulled off his clothes and dragged him onto a main street and held him up in the air.

"Some people would break through the crowd and hit me. But there were other people shouting at them. It seemed as if they wanted them to stop the beating," he was quoted as saying.

Durant, 32, was the pilot of one of two U.S. Blackhawk helicopters shot down Sunday night at the start of a 16-hour battle between U.N. forces and fighters loyal to fugitive warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid.

In Mogadishu, two American soldiers missing since Sunday's fire fight were found dead.

Capt. Tim McDavitt, a U.N. military spokesman, said the bodies were brought in over the past couple of days to one of the U.S. compounds in Mogadishu.

In Washington, they were identified as Sgt. Thomas J. Field, 25, of Lisbon, Maine, and Master Sgt. Gary I. Gordon, 33, of Lincoln, Maine.

And President Clinton also signaled his willingness to let warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid play a role in a political solution in Somalia.

An administration official, asking not to be identified, said Friday night the administration was moving toward an offer to Aidid under which the United States would cease efforts to capture him if he would call off attacks on American troops.

Robert Oakley, a former Bush administration official, was headed to Somalia at Clinton's behest to try to negotiate a deal.

fortunate and wept for his fellow crewmen, the report said.

"The first thing I was told was that the people had killed them all. Chopped them up," he was quoted as saying.

"Americans mean well," he said. "We did try to help. Things have gone wrong. My biggest fear is that the people living around this part of town will find out that I'm here and try to kill me."

Durant said he thought all the crew were alive when the helicopter crashed after being hit by a rocket-propelled grenade.

Gunfire began as soon as the helicopter crashed, and Durant couldn't move because of his injuries.

He told of being taken to three houses and chained up. Once he saw a gun in a doorway and it was fired, but the bullets hit the floor.

"I was hit by shrapnel, which I had to pull out of my arm," he was quoted as saying.

Speaking from his bed in a house in Mogadishu, he said he had been visited by a doctor each day to look at his broken right leg, facial injuries and bullet wounds.

Durant said his captors initially said they were trying to work out an exchange for 24 Somali prisoners.

"I heard on the radio that that won't happen," Durant was quoted as saying. "I don't want to hear, but I understand it."

An aide to Aidid has said Durant would not be freed unless all U.N.-held Somalis are released. The United Nations is holding 32 Somalis, including four described as key aides of Aidid. It was their capture that touched off the 15 hours of fighting on Sunday and Monday.

The Somalis have promised to allow more Red Cross visits, a spokesman that agency's spokesman in Geneva.

Paul Watson, a reporter in Mogadishu for the Toronto Star, said the Red Cross delegate reported that Durant was in strong mental condition.

The delegate asked what Durant needed, and he replied "a plane ticket home." Durant also said he could use a pizza, Watson said in an interview with CNN.

In Washington, White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said the Clinton administration was encouraged by the Red Cross visit.

"We continue to expect that he be treated according to international law, which includes visits from the Red Cross," she said.

Durant's sister, who is to be married on Saturday, spoke out Friday, urging Americans to look forward, avoid casting blame and avoid harshly judging the Somali people.

"We have to also understand the Somali people don't live like people in the United States. There's very little civilization left there. Their country has been in chaos. There has been starvation," said Mary Ellen Durant of Hyattsville, Md., in an interview on "CBS This Morning."

New Hampshire Gov. Steve Merrill invited Durant's relatives to the Statehouse Friday where they tied a yellow ribbon around a pillar in a ceremony attended by soldiers, school children and war veterans.

As six pairs of black combat boots sat starkly on a stage, hundreds of Army rangers and their families jammed an auditorium Friday to pay tribute to six Fort Benning soldiers killed in Somalia.

"Their act of selflessness and dedication deserve our highest praise," said Lt. Col. James T. Jackson, commander of the 75th Ranger Regiment. "Everything comes with a price. The price we paid on this operation was the lives of six outstanding young men."

About 1,900 people jammed the auditorium for the hour-long service at which Army chaplains and rangers who served in Somalia with the dead soldiers also spoke.

Report blames Koresh, not FBI, for Waco deaths

WASHINGTON (AP) — Branch Davidian leader David Koresh "choreographed his own death and the deaths of most of his followers" in the nightmarish end to the 51-day standoff with federal agents, said a government report absolving the FBI of wrongdoing in its tear-gas assault.

Koresh battered children's lives "like pieces of silver" in sham negotiations with authorities before he and followers set fire to the compound and killed children with knives, guns and clubs, Edward S.G. Dennis Jr., a former Justice Department official who headed the probe, said Friday.

Dennis' report exonerated the Attorney General Janet Reno, the Justice Department and the FBI of any wrongdoing in the April 19 tear-gas assault on the Mount Carmel compound.

The report attributed the deaths of as many as 85 people to either mass suicide or mass murder. "It is not clear that those inside the compound were prepared to give up their lives" to make Koresh a martyr, Dennis told reporters.

In a chilling revelation about the final hours of the siege, the report said Branch Davidian members murdered a number of the children. One 3-year-old boy was stabbed in the chest, three others were shot in the head, and others suffered fatal blows to the head, the report said.

The report also recites numerous negotiating sessions in which Koresh would demand something — broadcast of one of his sermons, for instance — in exchange for the release of one or two children.

The spectacle of children's lives battered like pieces of silver by a twisted mind will haunt me and the others involved in this matter for the rest of our lives," Dennis, a Philadelphia attorney and deputy attorney general in the Bush administration, told a news conference. Dennis blamed Koresh and his followers for setting the flames that engulfed the compound shortly after the FBI injected tear gas into the compound.

The report praised the FBI for never returning the fire of cult members. FBI officials also officials sufficiently considered the possibility of mass suicide before waging the tear-gas assault, Dennis said. His report concluded that further negotiations were unlikely to bring a peaceful solution.

'The spectacle of children's lives bartered like pieces of silver by a twisted mind will haunt me and the others involved in this matter for the rest of our lives.'

— Investigator Edward S.G. Dennis Jr.

"An indefinite siege was not a realistic option," Dennis concluded.

"David Koresh held the fate of his followers in his hands," Dennis said. "In the end, being unsuccessful in maneuvering law enforcement to bring about the prophetic martyrdom he sought, in a last and fatal act of manipulation, he choreographed his own death and the deaths of most of his followers."

"This was the final act of a man who held himself out to be God," Dennis said.

Koresh planned before the tear gas to set such a fire, Dennis said. The report's one rather mild criticism dealt with conflicts between FBI's negotiators, who wanted to continue efforts to achieve a peaceful solution, and tactical agents, who pressured the sect with loud music and cut off electrical power.

Several times, such actions were taken either without consulting the negotiators or over their objections, the report said.

Some negotiators felt that as a result, "the Davidians concluded that the negotiators had no influence over the decision makers and that the FBI was not trustworthy," Dennis said.

However, Dennis concluded that tactical actions aimed at increasing the agents' safety were "appropriately given priority over negotiating considerations."

The report noted that negotiators ultimately agreed with the decision to inject the tear gas.

But Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., criticized the report for failing to identify mistakes that could be repeated.

"If a similar event were to begin tomorrow, the same officials would pick up again where they left off, debating the relative merits of negotiation versus pressure," Edwards said.

Reno, who took responsibility for the assault and its disastrous results on April 19, said she did not view the report as a "whitewash," despite its lack of tough criticism. "I wasn't looking for vindication," she said.

Dennis said Reno made a reasonable decision to approve the assault.

The FBI and Justice officials seriously considered the possibility of mass suicide, and negotiators repeatedly asked Koresh and top aide Steve Schneider if individual or mass suicides were likely, Dennis said.

Koresh planned to exit the compound with Greg Summers, who would have an explosive device strapped around his waist so that they would blow themselves up in front of the FBI," Dennis wrote, citing an interview by the Texas Rangers.

Ultimately, the coroner identified 75 bodies — 50 adults and 25 children — who died April 19 at the compound, according to a detailed chronology of the siege compiled by Reno aide Richard Scruggs.

Clinton wants to boost security

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans must feel "a higher level of security" in such disparate areas as crime, trade and health if they are to be persuaded to embrace needed change, President Clinton said Friday.

A day after announcing he would double the U.S. military deployment in Somalia, Clinton stepped back to can such travels to offer a philosophical look at a long-term agenda he said fit snugly under an umbrella theme of security.

"When you change a country, now, you can't just pass a law and change it," Clinton told the Democratic National Committee. "You can't just write a bill and change it. You have to change the behavior of the whole country. People have to change their lives. So, we can't do that unless people feel a higher level of security."

For Clinton, the speech was a warmup for a major address he plans next Tuesday as part of an administration effort to refocus public attention on domestic issues and the frame three months of the year.

Security was the major theme in Clinton's introduction of his health care reform plan, the administration's No. 1 domestic initiative. It is also evolving as the overriding theme as the White House tries to package its broader plans, whether the topic be the North American Free Trade Agreement, the coming crime bill debate or next year's planned emphasis on welfare reform.

To make his case Friday, Clinton methodically listed his priorities and tied each to the theme of security.

Guaranteed health care, he said, would give Americans the security of knowing they can move, change jobs or start a small business.

Passing the crime bill, Clinton said, would mean new handgun controls and 50,000 more police on the street, making Americans feel more secure about their neighborhoods.

Biggest rocket builder expanding

WASHINGTON (AP) — Martin Marietta, which makes the biggest American rockets, is trying to break into the medium-size market by buying the space business of General Dynamics, a published report says.

Aerospace Daily, an industry newsletter, said Friday that Martin Marietta has agreed to the purchase and "is getting the business at a bargain price." It quoted financial sources.

Rumors that such a sale was in the works have been current on Wall Street for several weeks.

"I don't think it's really a surprise," said Jack Modzelewski, an analyst for Paine Webber. "There is an overcapacity for lifting things into space."

He called such a sale a perfect fit for both aerospace giants. "Martin Marietta has been a buyer and General Dynamics has been a seller," Modzelewski said.

General Dynamics makes Atlas vehicles, while Martin Marietta makes Titans, which have double the Atlas lifting capacity. The third major builder, McDonnell Douglas, manufactures the Delta — highest of the three rocket families.

"It's Martin Marietta policy not to comment on such rumors, verify such rumors or speculate on acquisition activities," said Charles Manor, spokesman for the company at its Bethesda, Md., headquarters. Al Spivak of General Dynamics also declined comment.

Howard Rubel, an industry analyst with Goldman, Sachs & Company in New York, advised clients that the Air Force and NASA both indicated they are in favor of consolidating the launch vehicle marketplace. He predicted the stock market would react favorably to the sale. In late afternoon trading, Martin Marietta was unchanged.

Appeals court kills lawsuit by Quayle accuser

WASHINGTON (AP) — A divided federal appeals court killed a lawsuit Friday by an inmate who said prison officials disciplined him during the 1988 presidential campaign to squelch allegations he sold marijuana to Dan Quayle.

By a 2-1 vote, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here said Brett Kimberlin's claims that his rights were violated are based on insufficient evidence to warrant a trial against former Bureau of Prisons director J. Michael Quinn and former Justice Department spokesman Loye Miller.

"Kimberlin relies only on inference and weak circumstantial evidence," said Judge Karen LeCraft Henderson in an opinion concurred in by Judge Stephen Williams. Both were appointed to the court by former President Reagan.

In a sharply worded dissent, Judge Harry Edwards said the ruling is "unfathomable in this country under our constitutional system."

"I simply cannot imagine that the judiciary of the United States will shut the doors of the courthouse and refuse to allow Kimberlin's suit to proceed for the specious reason that his complaint is based on circumstantial evidence," said Edwards, an appointee of former President Carter.

A month ago, Justice Department inspector general Richard Hankinson concluded that officials unfairly disciplined Kimberlin.

Beer company confirms party animal is dead

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The beer bash really is over for Spuds MacKenzie, Anheuser-Busch's famed party animal.

The ultra-cool Bud Light spokesdog—rumored to have died in a limousine wreck, a plane crash and a hot-tub accident—died last May of kidney failure, Anheuser-Busch confirmed Thursday. "The dog, really, a female—died at her home in suburban Chicago just before her 10th birthday."

The pedigreed bull terrier, whose real name was Honey Tree Evil Eye, or H.E.Y., for short, first appeared on a national TV spot for Bud Light during the 1987 Super Bowl. For two years, Spuds was highly visible, helping to make Bud Light one of America's top-selling brews.

"We were crushed when we learned of Spuds' death," said Bob Lachky, Bud Light marketing director.

In commercials, Spuds was always surrounded by beautiful women at bars and parties, so naturally most watchers believed the dog was male. But Spuds turned out to be a female.

—A fact that brought Spuds one of Esquire magazine's Dubious Achievement Awards six years ago.

Human gene mapping project will not meet goal

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—The government's grand plan to decipher the entire human genetic code is not backed by enough money to get the job done by target year 2005, the project's director says.

That will delay many of the new disease treatments and preventive measures already beginning to flow from the project, said Dr. Francis Collins, head of the human genome project at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

"Medical advances will be delayed. The U.S. competitive position will suffer. The Japanese are ramping up their efforts," Collins said in an interview.

First lady's brother fined for lead foot

DILLSBURG, Pa. (AP)—Hillary Rodham Clinton's brother left court with a lighter wallet after a fine levied because of his heavy foot.

Anthony D. Rodham, 39, was fined $114 for speeding.

Rodham, of Coral Gables, Fla., was stopped in August for speeding on U.S. 15 in south-central Pennsylvania. He was found guilty Wednesday of traveling at 65 mph in a 55-mph zone.

District Justice Paul Walters said he wasn't fazed by the presence of President Clinton's brother-in-law in his court.

Some meat labeling requirements delayed

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Clinton Administration gave a reprieve to the food industry Friday, announcing that only ground or chopped meat will have to carry safe-handling labels starting next Friday.

The industry was given an additional six months—until April 15—to put safe-handling labels on packages of all other uncooked meat and poultry products.

The department said, however, that safe-handling information, such as brochures, would have to be available wherever such products are sold, starting next Friday.

That was the original deadline the department set in August for all uncooked meat products—including beef, lamb, pork and poultry—to carry labels aimed at protecting shoppers and restaurant customers from food poisoning.

The department is also launching an information campaign, including radio announcements, to promote safe handling.

Cigarette tax would boost Social Security payments

WASHINGTON (AP)—Social Security beneficiaries have a special stake in President Clinton's plan to slap higher taxes on tobacco in the name of health.

It would have the indirect effect of raising their Social Security benefits by roughly $3 a month, the reason.

Social Security benefits are tied to the Consumer Price Index, and government officials said Friday a 75-cent tax increase on cigarettes would push the inflation index up by 0.5 percentage point the year it was enacted.

That in turn would result at year's end in a $35 annual raise for the average Social Security beneficiary, said officials from the Social Security Administration and the Space station cuts will cost 4,000 jobs

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Decreasing the size of NASA's space station program means as many as 4,000 people will lose their jobs, many of them in Southern California, industry officials said.

McDonnell Douglas Aerospace will lay off about 1,400 workers in suburban Huntington Beach, Houston and St. Louis, and expects subcontractors will lay off an additional 1,000, spokesman Thomas E. Williams said Thursday.

NASA told McDonnell Douglas it will receive $427 million for space station work in the fiscal year that began Friday, down from more than $700 million last year.

One announcement highlights statements from the parents of Riley Detwiler of Bellingham, Wash., who died in January at age 17 months from an outbreak of food poisoning caused by contaminated hamburgers.

"The important factor is to get the information out to the public, which is what the rule does," said Steve Kinsella, spokesman for Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy.

The changes in the final version of the rule reflect industry complaints that two months was too little time for all meat and poultry products—about 15 billion retail packages sold each year—to carry labels. About half those packages contain ground or chopped products, according to one industry estimate.

Ground or chopped products pose an especially high risk because the surface bacteria are mixed inside the product, allowing the bacteria to multiply and avoid the high surface cooking temperatures that could kill them. A trade group for wholesale grocers and food service distributors filed a lawsuit, still pending, to block implementation of the rules.

The American Meat Institute, the leading trade group for meat packers and processors, threatened a lawsuit unless the timetable was changed.

Members of Congress, including Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., a leading poultry state and home of President Clinton, also urged Espy to phase in the label.

The labeling requirement was among several actions Espy took in response to recent outbreaks of food poisoning. The largest occurred in mid-January in Washington state just as he took office.

The Detwiler child and two other children, died and 500 people became ill after illnesses that were linked to E. coli O157:H7 bacteria. The outbreak was traced to hamburgers served by the Jack in the Box chain.

The labels were also part of settlement of a lawsuit by Jeremy Rifkin's Beyond Beef Campaign, which demanded warnings on all meat and poultry products.

U.N. lifts South African sanctions

UNITED NATIONS — South Africa's pariah status and the era of apartheid boycotts ended Friday when the General Assembly lifted economic sanctions against Pretoria.

The action was largely symbolic, because Western nations and the Organization of African Unity already have repealed sanctions they adopted at the General Assembly's behest.

Declaring that South Africa's march to multiracial democracy has begun, the 184-nation assembly put an end to three decades of condemnations and voluntary sanctions ranging from foreign investment to sports. And it urged its members to start doing desperately needed business with South Africa immediately.

Serbs reported advancing in Bosnia

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Fighting intensified on a key supply route in central Bosnia, and Serb troops were reported advancing Friday on a besieged Muslim enclave in the east.

Sarajevo and much of the rest of Bosnia had been comparatively quiet in recent weeks as the warring sides haggled over a peace plan to divide Bosnia into Serb, Croat and mostly Muslim mini-states. The plan collapsed last week when the Serbs and Croats withdrew territorial concessions to the Bosnian government because it had demanded more.

The Muslim-led Bosnian army, meanwhile, claimed that three mass graves containing 575 bodies of civilians had been found near Mostar in southwestern Bosnia, state-run radio reported Friday.

Russian rebels may face treason charge

MOSCOW — Alexander Rutskoi and other hard-line leaders will likely be charged with "betrayal of the motherland," a crime punishable by death, for their role in this week's violent revolt, a Russian news agency said Friday.

Meanwhile, President Boris Yeltsin's government plowed ahead with plans for legislative elections and said a new, post-Soviet constitution might also be on the ballot.

Moscow remained quiet. Nearly 4,400 people were detained from the previous night for violating the emergency curfew, and 3,632 were arrested for other minor offenses, including public drunkenness, as part of a general crackdown on crime.

Prosecutors are determining whether parliamentary leaders, who for nearly two weeks defied Yeltsin's call to disband, incited their armed supporters to storm the Moscow mayor's office, TV complex and the Kremlin on Sunday.

Crackdown shows Saddam in control

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Saddam Hussein's security forces have rounded up hundreds of prominent members of his Tiktiti clan and other Sunni Muslims who have long supported him, Iraqi rebels and other sources say.

The crackdown against Saddam's own minority sect indicates that after three years of U.N. sanctions and Iraq's isolation, even those who have traditionally been a pillar of the Baghdad regime may be turning against it.

Secret police are everywhere in Baghdad, and it is difficult to assess whether Sunni disenchantment with Saddam has reached a point where it will affect his rule. Saddam is clearly still in control.

The purge is Saddam's most extensive since he crushed rebellions by Shiite Muslims and Kurdish separatists right after the 1991 Gulf War.

Bodies may be signs of Australian killer

BOWRAL, Australia — Police believe a serial killer has been preying on backpacking tourists for years and dumping their bodies in a rugged forested area known as "Executioner's Drop."

Four young victims found in Belanglo state forest southwest of Sydney were probably killed by the same person, Police Superintendent Clive Small said Friday.

The remains of James Gibson, 19, were found Tuesday alongside another skeleton, believed to be that of his backpacking companion, Deborah Evenst, also 19. Both were Australians.

Haitians demonstrate against democracy

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Hundreds of Haitians opposed to the return of democracy marched through the streets of this capital Friday, cracking whips, making voodoo signs and demanding: "Give us back our country."

The march was sponsored by a small but powerful military-backed group, the Front for the Advancement and Progress of Haiti, which used gunfire and threats to shut down Port-au-Prince on Thursday.

The President's Somalia plan: Is it enough?

By Reid G. Miller
The Associated Press

NAIROBI, Kenya — President Clinton says it's not the United States' job to build a stable political system in Somalia.

He's giving the Somalis six months to get a start on it themselves.

But can the basis of a working government be built that quickly in a country that has known 22 years of dictatorship and nine years of clan-based warfare in 33 years of independence?

The elbow-shaped country that forms the Horn of Africa is largely semi-desert scrubland. Its past is feudal, nomadic and colonial, and it has no democratic traditions.

Its 6.5 million people remain mostly nomadic and belong to six major clans and a bewildering number of sub-clans.

The clans have been fighting among themselves for centuries over Somalia's scarce resources, primarily grazing and water rights. Nowadays, the fighting is over who will rule the country.

U.S. soldiers move into position Thursday at the Mogadishu airport.

In ordering an additional 5,300 combat troops into Somalia to bolster the 4,700 U.S. soldiers already there,

Analysis

Clinton said he wanted to give the Somalis "a reasonable chance" of getting back on their political feet.

His deadline was March 31, when he said all American combat troops would be withdrawn from the East African nation.

But Somalia remains shattered even after U.S.-led multinational forces arrived in December to restore order after widespread famine, disease and warfare killed about 350,000 people last year.

In a March meeting of Somalia's 15 major political factions in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, the leaders signed an agreement on a cease-fire and a system of mediating disputes.

The ink was barely dry when battles broke out in and around the southern part of Kismayu between militias of two clans that had signed the pact.

I took a combined American-Belgian force nearly a month to halt the fighting between Mohamed Siad Hirsi, a son-in-law of former dictator Mohamed Siad Barre, and Col. Omar Jess.

Jess is an ally of fugitive warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid, who is wanted by the United Nations for a series of attacks that have killed 88 U.N. peacekeepers. Jess was thought to be acting with Aidid's support.

The United Nations is trying to cobble together a new political system with 92 district councils, 15 regional councils and a national assembly.

All of the councils are meant to be drawn from a cross-section of society in an attempt to lessen the influence of the dozens of warlords and wealthy political powerbrokers.

But that effort is behind schedule, with only 36 district councils formed so far. The first regional council was to be certified Saturday by Jonathan Howe, the U.N. special envoy to Somalia. Howe's original timetable called for the formation of a transitional national assembly in January, with free, democratic presidential and parliamentary elections in January 1995.

Wounded U.S. soldiers back Somalia policy

LANDSTUHL, Germany (AP) — American soldiers wounded fighting Somali gunmen said Friday the armed vehicles President Clinton is sending to Somalia would have helped them in a deadly battle this week.

Communications with Pakistani tank crews and Malaysian armored personnel carrier drivers slowed the rescue of American troops pinned down by Somali gunfire in a 16-hour battle Sunday and Monday, said one of the survivors, Sgt. Richard Lamb.

Clinton has ordered dozens of armored vehicles sent to Somalia along with 5,300 more soldiers and Marines.

His decision to bolster the U.S. contingent of the United Nations force was endorsed by injured soldiers at the Landstuhl military hospital.

"I don't think we should back out," said Spc. Carlos Rodriguez, a U.S. Army Ranger based at Fort Benning, Georgia.

The soldiers were generally reluctant to talk about what went wrong with the mission. But Lamb said language problems slowed the rescue of soldiers who were trapped trying to rescue a helicopter crew shot down by militiamen loyal to clan leader Mohamed Farrah Aidid.

Lamb's unit turned to the Pakistanis and Malaysians after non-armored Ranger Humvees and trucks were turned back by gunfire, he said.

Army Spc. Carlos Rodriguez Doesn't want to back out.

The Asian troops "were real helpful and willing to go," Lamb said, but "it took some time because of language difficulties."

Lamb, a 34-year-old Ranger from Des Moines, Iowa, seemed cheerful in a bedside interview this morning, a few hours after being flown in from Somalia. He suffers headaches from a piece of shrapnel lodged in his brain.

"Most of the missions we had down there were quick in, quick out," said Lamb. "This time we stayed on the ground too long."

Rodriguez, 20, said that after being struck by Somali sniper bullets, he was trapped for nine or 10 hours in a building before armored personnel carriers could get in to pick him up.

"I hope I don't have to do it again," he said.

Sgt. Robert L. Jackson Jr., recovering from severe chest bruises, described passing through "a gauntlet of fire" to reach the injured Rangers in an armored personnel carrier. He was hit by grenade fragments, but his flak jacket saved him.

A total of 68 injured soldiers, including one who later died, have been flown to the Landstuhl military hospital from Somalia.

from the men injured in the 1983 embassy bombing in Beirut (Lebanon), for example," said Lt. Col. Rene Robichaux, the chief surgical worker.

"These guys don't see themselves as victims. They were doing what they wanted to do and don't blame someone for putting them there."

The U.S. military hospital at Landstuhl hasn't seen this much activity since the Gulf War, and surgeons are "breaking down the doors" to work on patients flown in from Somalia, said the hospital's deputy director, Col. David Lipsi.

Gen. Wayne A. Downing, commander of U.S. Special Operations Command in MacDill, Fla., pinned Purple Heart medals on the wounded men Thursday.

Red Cross visits American captive in Somalia

GENEVA (AP) — A Red Cross delegate visited a captured American helicopter pilot in the Somali capital Friday and took away a letter the U.S. soldier wrote to his family.

The meeting with Capt. Warrant Officer Michael Durant occurred this morning at an undisclosed location in Mogadishu, agency spokesman Tony Burgener said. He had no further details on the pilot's condition.

Durant, 32, of Berlin, N.H., has been captive since Sunday.

"The delegate had the possibility to talk to him in detail about all the problems he might have," said Burgener. "He must feel relieved a little bit now to know that someone is caring about him and that we can visit him again."

Burgener said Durant wrote a message to his family and it was being delivered by the American Red Cross.

Durant's sister, Mary Ellen Durant, called on Americans to unite behind the missing troops in Somalia and said she was confident her family's crisis would end favorably.

"I know my brother. I know God. I trust them both. Things will work out," she said in an interview on the news show "CBS This Morning."

5 die during raid on S. African home

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — South African troops killed five young people Friday in a raid on a home they said was being used by a black nationalist guerrilla group.

Nelson Mandela condemned the shootings as "pure terrorism" by government forces.

The Pan Africanist Congress, the troops' declared target, said four boys and a young man were shot in the head at point-blank range, and that none was a guerrilla.

The army said its troops shot and killed five people who "offered resistance" and seized weapons and documents during the assault.

Council wants governor's mansion despite Andrus' objection

BOISE (AP) — The Permanent Building Fund Advisory Council on Friday voted to go ahead with construction of a million-dollar, state-owned governor's residence over the objection of Gov. Cecil Andrus.

The council, appointed by the governor, unanimously directed the Public Works Division to negotiate a contract for up to $150,000 with architect Darrell McMillen of Sun Valley to design the residence.

"It's not a politically popular thing for a governor to say, 'We have all these other needs in the state, but I want you to take X number of dollars and build a governor's residence,'" House Appropriations Chairman Kathleen Gurnsey, R-Boise, told the council. "But I think we owe it to whoever is governor of this state to provide him with a decent place to live."

Andrus, citing the state's inability to finance its most critical building needs, asked the council earlier this week to delay at least until next spring any action on construction of a governor's residence. He wanted the Legislature to have another chance at coming up with a way of funneling more cash to state buildings.

Only after money is found for prison, education and other major projects, the retiring Democratic chief executive said, would it be proper to consider spending $1

'I think we owe it to whoever is governor of this state to provide him with a decent place to live.'

— State Rep. Kathleen Gurnsey, R-Boise million on a governor's home.

The front-runner for the Republican nomination to succeed Andrus, former Lt. Gov. Phil Batt, called for the council to completely abandon the project two weeks ago, saying it runs contrary to the public mood and the money could be better spent.

"I agree we must find a way to address these pressing needs," said Rep. Donna Jones, R-Payette, a member of the council. But she agreed with others that both the Legislature and Andrus had formally approved spending the planning money last March and it was not the council's job to countermand that action.

Gurnsey said it would be difficult as it is to have the residence ready by January 1995 when the new governor takes office and any delay would make it impossible.

She also pointed out that while Andrus vetoed an appropriation to build a governor's residence 19 years ago during his first term, he did not veto the planning money for the project this time around when he had the chance last spring.

Boise architect Charles Hummel, who serves with Gurnsey on the special governor's residence committee this year, said it was unfair for Andrus to attack the project now, calling the governor's intervention "political fun and games."

The state constitution requires the governor to live in Ada County, and the state once owned a house for the governor's use about two miles west of the Capitol.

But the structure was so run down that in 1987 at Andrus' request, the Legislature agreed to sell the property and put the proceeds — about $221,000 — toward construction of an acceptable residence at some future time. Andrus has owned a home in Boise for years.

That fund, augmented by the Legislature in 1990 with another $780,000 in state money and since then with limited amounts from other sources, is earmarked solely for a residence and can be spent for nothing else.

Gurnsey said the residence committee is expecting a four-bedroom home of about 5,000 square feet on a 15-acre lot the state already owns about a mile north of the Capitol.

Killer's mom speaks up for mentally ill

IDAHO FALLS — The mother of a admitted killer diagnosed with a bipolar mental disorder is mobilizing on her son's behalf the mentally ill advocacy group she founded.

"Why are we sacrificing him?" says Barbara Barrington, whose son Matthew McConnell, 25, pleaded guilty to the 1990 second-degree murder of his father, Roy McConnell. "He is well now but he isn't cured. You can't cure mental illness. You can treat it."

McConnell was ordered imprisoned for seven years to life 15 months ago by 7th District Judge Ted Wood. But because he was diagnosed with a manic-depressive condition, Wood suspended the sentence so McConnell could continue being treated at a local mental health facility. Barrington said the Idaho Falls chapter of the Alliance for the Mentally Ill, which she founded, stepped in after Wood ordered McConnell imprisoned, because his condition had improved to the point he could be adequately treated in prison.

State wants double murderer executed

IDAHO FALLS — Prosecutors want former Jackson, Wyo., pawnshop owner William Gray Jr. sentenced to death for killing his wife and another woman four years ago.

Gray, 53, will be sentenced Nov. 1 for the July 1989 first-degree murders of Betty Lou Gray and her friend, Reda B. Roudy. The women were found shot to death in Roudy's rented house in rural Idaho Falls. A jury convicted Gray in June after a three-week trial.

Deputy Attorney General Michael Kane, the special prosecutor in the case, said in an Oct. 1 recommendation to 7th District Judge Ted Wood that the death penalty was justified by Gray's "utter disregard for human life."

Blaze ruins ski resort owner's business

DRIGGS — Flames destroyed one of Grand Targhee Ski and Summer Resort owner Mory Bergmeyer's Teton Valley businesses for the second time in less than four years.

Grand Teton Furniture Co., just north of Driggs on Idaho Highway 33, was gutted Friday morning. The three-year-old factory employed 13 people making lodgepole pine furniture designed by Bergmeyer. The fire was reported shortly after 5:30 a.m. at the large metal building. Crews from the Teton Valley-Driggs Volunteer Fire Department had it out by about 10 a.m. Bergmeyer estimated damages at $400,000. No one was injured.

Sandpoint OKs addition despite threats

SANDPOINT — The Sandpoint City Council has approved a massive annexation plan despite pleas, complaints and threats of legal action.

"There has been no issue more heart-wrenching than this," Councilman David Sawyer told a crowd of about 50 people Thursday, none of whom supported the plan to quadruple the size of Sandpoint by adding nearly 17,000 acres.

"But I feel this is what's right in the long run," Sawyer said. "If we don't go ahead with this, we are going to have a worse scenario on our hands."

The council ignored new boundaries the nearby smaller towns of Ponderay and Dover created last week through voluntary annexation plans launched to escape what some have called Sandpoint's "midnight border raid." All the cities expect they will ask a judge to settle the feud.

State adopts day-care assistance rules

BOISE — The Idaho Office for Children has adopted a hearing officer's recommended list of final rules and regulations for a federal grant program providing day-care assistance to low- and moderate-income parents.

The new Idaho Child Care Program rules were recommended after a series of public hearings throughout the state. Gov. Cecil Andrus said the regulations will guide the use of about $4 million a year in child-care subsidies.

The rules establish quality standards that day-care operators must meet to voluntarily participate in the program, effective Jan. 1. They include staff-to-child ratios, health and safety requirements, and reimbursement rates for child care in each community based on income and a local market rate survey being conducted by the Office for Children.

Fatal wreck nets 3rd alcohol charge

MOSCOW — Another person has been charged with providing beer to five Troy teen-agers July 16, including one youth who died later that night in an alcohol-related car crash.

Christopher Ables, 20, of Troy, is the third man accused of providing alcohol to the teens the day Preston Giovannetti, 16, was killed in the accident.

Ables is scheduled to be arraigned Wednesday before Latah County Magistrate William Hamlet.

John V. Lewis, 21, a former Troy resident, was placed on probation and sentenced to eight days in jail after pleading guilty to giving beer to the youths. Bryan Eberhardt, 21, of Troy, is scheduled to stand trial on procurement charges starting next Friday.

Judge refuses to step down from infant death case

MOSCOW (AP) — Second District Judge John Bengtson refused to disqualify himself from presiding over the trial of a former University of Idaho student accused of killing her newborn son last year.

Attorneys for Megan Heber, accused Bengtson of making biased statements when he rejected a proposed plea agreement that would have reduced the charge against Heber from second-degree murder to involuntary manslaughter.

But the judge denied the request from Allen Bowles of Moscow and Tim Greshback of Coeur d'Alene.

"I am confident that the decisions I have already rendered in this case were the product of my analysis of the law and not the product of any bias or prejudice either for the state or against the defendant," Bengtson said.

He assured the attorneys that he would remove himself from the case if anything led him to believe he could not continue to preside in a fair and impartial manner.

Heber, 20, is scheduled to stand trial beginning Oct. 18 for the Oct. 4, 1992, slaying of her son. She is accused of pressing her hand on the baby's chest and neck in anger shortly after giving birth to the boy alone in her University of Idaho dormitory room.

The boy was found dead after being dumped down in a laundry chute from the 11th floor of the university's Theophilus Tower.

Hostetler gets two more weeks of freedom

By Phil Sahm
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Jodie Ann Hostetler must report to the Twin Falls County Jail on Oct. 25 as a stopover on the way to state prison for felony child abuse.

After receiving the news Friday in a sparsely attended hearing, Hostetler, 22, wept.

She pleaded guilty in May 1992 to injury to a child after her 2-year-old daughter, Amanda, died in January of that year from a severe blow to the abdomen.

Hostetler's boyfriend at the time was charged with first-degree murder, but a jury acquitted him.

Under a plea bargain with then-Twin Falls County Prosecuting Attorney K. Ellen Baxter, Hostetler would have served two years' probation and a suspended prison term. But Judge J. William Hart rejected that agreement and in August 1992 sentenced Hostetler to three to nine years in prison.

She appealed the sentence, but in August this year the Idaho Court of Appeals upheld the sentence.

Friday, Hart told Hostetler she must start her sentence.

Attorney Tom Kershaw asked Hart to reconsider his decision. While awaiting

'Jodie is terrified'

— attorney Tom Kershaw

the ruling on her appeal, Hostetler has "quietly and respectfully" lived in the Sun Valley area the past year, Kershaw said.

"I think she has proved she's a person who's not dangerous to society," he said.

Kershaw described Hostetler as a viable candidate for probation and said that people who need jail the least are the most frightened by it.

"Jodie is terrified," he said.

Deputy Prosecuting Attorney John Lothspiech urged Hart to send Hostetler to prison.

"It's time for the imposition of the sentence," Lothspiech said.

With the appeals process completed, Hart ordered Hostetler to start serving her time.

Kershaw asked for a couple of weeks' leeway for Hostetler to take care of some medical problems and store her belongings.

Hostetler's former boyfriend, Donnell "Bud" Stradley, stood trial in December 1992 for Amanda's death.

Prosecutors charged that Amanda died after Stradley tossed her toward a water bed and she landed on the corner bed post.

A jury elected Stradley of first-degree murder and involuntary manslaughter charges after his lawyers raised doubts about how far the child had been thrown and character witnesses testified that Stradley never intentionally harmed a child.

ATV collision with car kills Wendell man

WENDELL — A 24-year-old Wendell man died Thursday evening after he drove his all-terrain vehicle out of a farm driveway into a car.

Tobey Shane Connell died in the accident at 6:30 p.m.; said a dispatcher with the Idaho State Police. The accident happened at 550 West 200 North near the Gooding and Jerome County lines, the dispatcher said.

Connell ran into a 1978 Buick driven by Lleanor L. Salazar, also of Wendell, who was westbound on 200 north.

Salazar was treated and released from St. Benedict's Family Medical Center in Jerome, the dispatcher said. No citations were issued in the accident.

Girl injured on Highway 30 when car hit by butcher truck

FILER — A 17-year-old Buhl girl suffered a broken pelvis Friday after she drove her car in front of a mobile butchering truck on Highway 30, a Twin Falls County sheriff's deputy said.

Jennifer Williamson was trying to cross the highway at 2300 East, said Deputy Eddie Aldritt.

Williamson started to drive across the highway, but evidently hesitated as she pulled out of the intersection, Aldritt said.

Gregory D. Ringling of Wendell was driving the butchering truck eastbound on 30. He tried to swerve but broadsided Williamson's Chevrolet Cavalier, Aldritt said.

A witness reported Ringling was not driving unduly fast before the accident, he said. Williamson was wearing a seat belt. Citations are pending, Aldritt said.

Banks, government offices will close for Columbus Day

TWIN FALLS — Banks, financial services offices and all Magic Valley local, county, state and federal government offices will be closed Monday in observance of Columbus Day.

Area schools, however, will remain open.

The only Magic Valley school that plans to close Monday is the College of Southern Idaho.

There will be no mail delivery, but state-owned and contract liquor stores will be open for business and in Twin Falls.

Public libraries will close throughout the valley, but most stores will be open for business as usual.

Although banks and savings and loans will be closed Monday, some federally chartered banks locally will be open for business as usual Saturday morning.

Burley BLM seeks comment on animal control program

BURLEY — The Burley District of the Bureau of Land Management has completed its "proposed final decision" on the district's animal damage control program.

This final decision will become final after an appeal period. The BLM has copies of the final decision and is taking any letters of comment for the next 30 days. Appeals requests will be handled by District Manager Gerald Quinn in Burley.

BLM will boost rehabilitation of scorched Ro Fire area

SHOSHONE — The Bureau of Land Management's Shoshone District will conduct additional rehabilitation efforts on land burned by the 25,000-acre "Ro Fire" last August in the Hailey and Bellevue areas.

Dave Koehler, Monument Resource Area manager, said that some south-facing slopes have not shown a large amount of perennial plant growth, even though last year's rehabilitation efforts were successful.

"We have identified 2,900 acres that we will re-seed with primarily perennial grasses and some forbs to enhance watershed stabilization," Koehler said.

Beginning Oct. 12, the BLM will also install more erosion-control structures in the upland drainages of the southern slopes of Lee's Gulch and Townsend Gulch. These structures will add to the 500 erosion dams installed in those gulches last year.

Twin Falls cheese plant changes hands

By Mick Norrington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Avonmore West Inc. laid off five employees Friday while pledging to update and expand the cheese plant in Twin Falls that the company took over from Western Dairymen's Cooperative Inc.

Avonmore President David L. Thomas wouldn't return calls to comment on the plant take-over.

Whether the acquisition was a buyout or an assumption of the plant was unclear from a news release issued by Avonmore. Officials with Western Dairymen's Cooperative in Salt Lake City couldn't be reached for comment.

The plant is at 236 Washington St. S. Avonmore reported that prior to taking over the Twin Falls plant its officials interviewed each of the plant's 51 employees and "selected the best 46 people to operate the plant."

"Some positions were eliminated in order to maximize the plant's efficiency and in order to gain economies of scale when combined with Avonmore's other Magic Valley operations," the company said in a prepared statement.

Michael Grogan, Avonmore's director of cheese operations, will supervise the plant's expansion process to increase its capacity by more than 50 percent by spring 1994, the company reported.

The plant produces 640-pound blocks of cheese.

The Twin Falls plant already produces 250 million pounds of milk a year into 25 million pounds of cheddar cheese in 40-pound blocks.

Avonmore is already Idaho's biggest cheese producer and has plants in Gooding and Richfield. And the company has been buying whey, a by-product of cheese production, from the Twin Falls plant for six years.

Burkett bows to EchoHawk, will run for his job

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Mike Burkett's decision to drop out of the governor's race and run for attorney general brings the Democratic Party one step closer to the "dream ticket" some party leaders have been pushing for.

But that may be as close as the Democrats get.

The former state senator's announcement came four weeks to the day after Attorney General Larry EchoHawk reversed a February decision and announced he would run for governor.

EchoHawk is viewed by many Democrats, Republicans and nonpartisan observers as his party's strongest gubernatorial candidate. Speculation that Burkett would drop out of the governor's race and run for attorney general began almost immediately after EchoHawk's announcement.

Burkett told The Times-News Friday that, given EchoHawk's entry into the gov-

TWIN FALLS — Not challenging Larry EchoHawk for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination gives Mike Burkett a good chance of succeeding EchoHawk as attorney general, political observers agreed.

"He's got a good grasp of issues from his time in the Legislature, and the fact that he got an early start organizing around the state gives him a major headstart," EchoHawk said.

Indeed, Burkett is the first candidate of any party to announce for attorney general, although several other people have been studying the race.

And state Democratic Party Chairman Bill Mauk said Burkett's move will cause about $200,000 in run for attorney general, compared with $1 million or more for a gubernatorial campaign.

Burkett said he thought he could have raised enough money for either race, but a campaign-for-attorney general would be "more reasonable."

The other Democrats in the governor's race are state Sen. John Peavey of Carey, former state Sen. Ron Belletschpacher of Grangeville and perennial candidate David Shepherd of Lewiston.

Also in the race are four Republicans — former Lt. Gov. Phil Batt of Wilder and Boise businessman Larry Eastland, Chuck Wilder and Doug Dorn — and independent Ron Rankin of Coeur d'Alene.

Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus is stepping down after four terms.

Burkett said neither Andrus nor state Democratic Party Chairman Bill Mauk put pressure on him to leave the governor's race.

Air Force gets bombing range money — with strings

By Julia Angwin
States News Service

WASHINGTON — The House and the Senate agreed Thursday to give the Air Force $6.7 million to expand its bombing range in Owyhee County, despite the opposition of environmentalists and a nearby Indian tribe.

But the money will not be allocated until the Air Force studies the effects of the expansion on the neighboring Duck Valley Indian Reservation and obtains a letter from Defense Secretary Les Aspin confirming the need for the range.

These conditions, known as "fencing in the money," were imposed at the urging of bombing range opponent Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev.

Unless a last-minute amendment is offered, which is unlikely, the legislation should be approved before Oct. 21 — over the objections of some senators.

"Why are we going to deplete funds sacred to a people who have already been taken advantage of?" Reid asked on the Senate floor on Sept. 13.

Shoshone-Paiute Indians, whose Duck Valley Reservation straddles the Idaho-Nevada border, already tolerate four to five sonic booms per day because they live under military airspace.

The 25,000 acres of proposed bombing range are within five miles of the reservation border and promise only to increase the air traffic, the American Indians say.

"My kids will be playing outside when they come over," said Richard Dick, vice chairman of the Shoshone-Paiute Tribal Council. "It startles them. They just freeze or start crying."

In addition, the bombing area houses some of the tribe's sacred burial sites and the site "Visions of the Ancestors," an experience sought by medicine men who go into the high desert to pray and speak to their creator.

"It's kind of like our church out there, where we go to pray," Dick said.

But the conditions imposed by the Nevada senator could deter the Air Force's plans.

A coalition called GOLD (Greater Owyhee Legal Defense) is threatening to sue the Air Force when it makes the second half of the Environmental Impact Study about the proposed ranges.

Brian Goller of the Idaho Conservation League is also raising the specter of endangered species — pointing out

Shoshone woman vows her fight against government will go on

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A Western Shoshone woman who won international recognition for her ongoing land battles with the federal government pledged Friday to continue those efforts until Native Americans are recognized as sovereign nations.

"People think we're incompetent to do anything for ourselves," Carrie Dann said in a telephone interview. "What we're doing is fighting for justice not only for indigenous people but people all over."

Carrie Dann, 54, and her sister, Mary, 64, this week were named winners of the "Right Livelihood Award" for "their courage and perseverance in asserting the right of indigenous people to their land."

Known as the "alternative Nobel," the award was founded in 1980 by Jakob von Uexkull, a Swedish-Norwegian writer and stamp collector, to support grassroots work that improves peoples' lives in practical ways.

The $200,000 prize, to be shared among five recipients, will be presented by the Swedish Parliament on Dec. 9.

"What we're doing is fighting for justice not only for indigenous people but people all over."

— Carrie Dann

Carrie Dann said the sisters, who have spearheaded the Western Shoshone Council's 20-year battle with the United States government over land and grazing rights, aren't sure if they'll attend the ceremonies. "Probably yes, but I really don't know," she said. "It all depends what our situation at our home here is like. I live from day to day; never in peace."

The award money likely would be used to help pay some of the sisters' legal fees and assist the Western Shoshone Defense Project.

"After all the hard times that we've been having, it'll probably just help us catch up on the expenses that we've incurred for so many years," she said.

The Danns' ongoing dispute with the Bureau of Land Management involves the issue of grazing rights.

The BLM maintains the sisters illegally graze livestock on public lands, and attempts to roundup the cattle and grazing rights have led to confrontations near their Crescent Valley ranch, 50 miles southwest of Elko.

"The Western Shoshone land dispute is not a dispute," Ms. Dann said. "It's Western Shoshone land."

The Western Shoshone National Council has called for a summit with the federal government to settle their disputes.

"I certainly would like to sit across the table with one of those officials," Ms. Dann said. "I think the time is due when we should be able to talk across the table—sovereign to sovereign."

2nd woman sues St. George Elks over membership denial

ST. GEORGE, Utah (AP) — The St. George Elks Lodge is the target of a second woman's lawsuit alleging the fraternal organization denied her membership because of her sex.

Rachel Cox, through her attorney Brian Barfield, filed the suit in 5th District court Friday. It named the local Elks lodge and its secretary, Charles D. Humphrey, as defendants.

Cox seeks a preliminary and permanent injunction against the defendants ordering them to "and cease all gender-based and religious-based discrimination."

Earlier, the lodge was sued by another St. George woman, Sandra Beynon, who was denied membership in the lodge in 1987. The Utah Alcohol Beverage Control Commission has threatened to take the lodge's liquor license for refusing to allow women members.

Cox's lawsuit seeks $400,000 in damages — $100,000 in special and general damages and $300,000 in punitive damages — from each of the defendants.

She also seeks a court order to have the lawsuit proceed as a class action against the defendants on gender and religious beliefs issues. Her attorney is seeking a court order to declare the lodge's private liquor club a public nuisance and close the club.

Cox applied for membership on July 15 through her husband and lodge sponsor, Richard Groke. The lawsuit claims that shortly after Groke submitted his wife's application, he was asked by lodge officers to withdraw the application.

Groke refused, and on Aug. 24, the lodge rejected her application, the suit states.

The suit claims she qualifies for membership under all criteria except her gender and her obscure answer to the question, "Do you believe in the existence of God?" on her application.

Cox answered that question, "Considering favorably."

Elks attorney Michael Shaw said he was aware of the suit, but had not had a chance Friday to discuss it with his clients.

On Monday, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear the Elks appeal of the Utah Supreme Court's decision that the club had to either allow female membership or give up its liquor license.

INEL contractor will test electric cars

JDAHO FALLS (AP) — An Idaho National Engineering Laboratory contractor will help with the effort to put "zero emission vehicles" on California highways before the end of the decade.

EG&G Idaho Inc., the U.S. Department of Energy's lead contractor at the INEL, agreed recently to help the California Air Resources Board evaluate electric vehicles and battery technology. The three-year agreement, announced this week, is valued at $500,000 for the first year and can be extended with the approval of both sides.

California regulations require that 2 percent of the vehicles sold in the state each year, starting in 1998, generate no tailpipe emissions. Sales of zero emission vehicles must be increased to 10 percent by 2003.

The only technology now offering zero emissions is electric vehicles.

to meet the expanding cheese requirements of our existing customers as well as develop new markets for natural cheeses," Thomas said in the prepared statement.

Barney Kreuger, Avonmore's former director of quality assurance, was appointed as the new manager of the Twin Falls plant on Friday.

Marvin Veeder, former manager of the company's Gooding plant, will serve as production manager at the Twin Falls plant, the company announced.

Avonmore officials also didn't say how they would expand.

Last spring, Avonmore officials said they intended to increase their cheese production if they could get more milk.

Milk production has been hurt by less feed for Idaho cows. That has led to reduced per-cow milk production. But milk production rose 1 percent in August as Idaho farmers have expanded their herds, according to recent reports from the Idaho Agricultural Statistics

Service.

Western Dairymen's Cooperative announced last spring it intended to close its Star Valley Cheese plant in Thayne, Wyo., in August. And cooperative officials said that cheese plants in Idaho had more capacity than the milk supply could support.

The Twin Falls plant was built in 1977 by Swift & Co., which was later known as Beatrice Cheese. Western Dairymen's Cooperative took over the plant in 1985.

that the area is home to the endangered peregrine falcon. It also is home to more than one-quarter of the California bighorn sheep in the United States, Goller said.

Goller also said a national archaeological district is in one of the proposed "impact areas" where bombs will be dropped. Native American petroglyphs, rock writings that could be more than 1,000 years old, are at the site, he said.

But those threats aside, an aide to Sen. Dirk Kempthorne, R-Idaho, said the letter from the Pentagon should be in the bus.

"We're extremely confident that the letter will be written once the bill is signed into law," he said.

The Air Force chief of staff was enthusiastic about the range.

"We need the expanded range capability for the readiness of our forces stationed at Mountain Home Air Force Base," General Merrill A. McPeak said in a written statement.

The Air Force envisions the two bombing areas being used in conjunction with the existing Saylor Creek Range — a 128,000-acre area used by fliers at the Mountain Home Air Force Base.

Adding two extra pieces of land would allow the Mountain Home "composite wing" to simulate combat conditions in the Idaho desert.

The wing is a collection of different aircraft whose crews train together.

Currently, the composite wing must waste fuel flying to bases in Nevada and Utah to find realistic scenarios, said Mountain Home spokesman Lt. Brian McPeak.

"With the added land parcels, he explained, the composite wing's planes could hit "border targets" in one parcel as they simultaneously attacked "deeper targets" in another parcel.

Currently, they can only fly to one target in the Saylor Creek Range, "bomb" it and return.

"We need a more advanced facility for the composite wing," McPeak said.

Burkett

But Mauk, speaking from a Democratic National Committee meeting in Washington, D.C., said Burkett made "a very smart decision, all things considered."

Burkett's move will help the Democrats retain both the governorship and the attorney general's office, Mauk said.

"It's a stronger overall ticket — a ticket of youth, diversity and a ticket that shows cooperation," he said.

Echohawk called Burkett's move "good news for me."

"He probably had the best organization of the three candidates who were in the race when I got in," he said. "He would have been a strong candidate in the primary."

Following Echohawk's entry into the governor's race last month, some Democratic officials began talking about a "dream ticket" with Echohawk for governor, Burkett for attorney general, and either Peavey or Beitelbacher for lieutenant governor.

But both Peavey and Beitelbacher said they're committed to opposing Echohawk in next May's primary, and that Burkett's decision leaves them a clearer field.

"It's definitely going to help," Peavey said. "There are just so many Democratic votes to go around — the chances are clearer now. Hopefully it will get down to two."

Echohawk and Burkett were perceived as appealing to the more conservative wing of the Democratic Party, while Peavey and Beitelbacher have been closer to the party's liberal wing.

Peavey said it would be "very helpful" for him if Beitelbacher dropped out to run for lieutenant governor. If he did so, Peavey added, "I'd endorse him in a minute."

But Beitelbacher, who last month hired two high-powered national political consultants for his campaign, said he had no intention of quitting the governor's race.

other potential candidates to think twice before getting into the campaign.

The attorney general's spot became more attractive after Echohawk, who won the job in 1990, announced last week that he was reversing an earlier decision not to run for governor.

Democrat Craig Mosman, former Latah County prosecutor, said Friday he was considering entering the attorney general's race. But Mosman said family and financial considerations would be more important factors in his decision than Burkett's move.

"There was a time when this decision would have been a very easy 'yes' for me," he said. "But things are different now."

Boise attorney Pat Kole, who lost to Echohawk in 1990, said he might be interested in the attorney general's job, but because of family concerns won't make any decision for several weeks.

Republican state Reps. Mark Stubbs of Twin Falls and Alan Lane of Meridian also have said they are looking at the race. Stubbs was out of town Friday and unavailable for comment.

Burley sex offender charged with not registering under law

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A man who failed to tell police that he was once convicted of a sex crime may become the first Idahoan to test the strength of a new state law. According to a police report, Jessie Franklin Palomarez, 22, was arrested Sept. 23 for failing to register with the Cassia County Sheriff's Department when he moved into the area.

Less than two years ago, Palomarez had pleaded guilty in Ada County District Court to lewd conduct with a minor child under 16, a felony.

A 1993 law requires recently convicted sex offenders be fingerprinted and photographed, and they must tell local police where they live.

Palomarez's parole officer told him he must register with the sheriff's office within five days of his move to Cassia County, and Palomarez acknowledged this by reading, signing and dating an affidavit filed in Cassia County Magistrate Court.

Sgt. Dave Tracy said that Palomarez told police when he was arrested that he had "just forgot."

Steve Tobiasson, an Idaho deputy attorney general in Boise, says failing to register is a felony punishable by up to five years in jail or $5,000 in fines.

"I assume this is the first of its kind in the state," Tobiasson said. "We'll be very interested in what happens."

As of Friday, 621 sex offenders have registered in the state, said Bob Taylor, analyst for the Bureau of Criminal Identification. In Minidoka County, there were four; in Cassia, there were nine, according to an Oct. 4 report. Tobiasson said a majority of the registered sex offenders have committed an offense against children. The list of 10 sexual offenses include rape, lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor, and possession of sexually exploitive material.

"It's good for law enforcement to know that these people are in the community, if they're going to try to do something like become the coach of a Little League or work at a day-care center and spend a lot of time around children," Tobiasson said. "If you don't keep track of them you're going to have other victims."

Palomarez was arraigned Sept. 27 with bail set at $1,500. He lived at 2841 Almo Ave., according to the police report.

He was still in jail Friday, according to officers at the Mini-Cassia Jail.

Utah, Harvard researchers learn how running dogs breathe

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah and Harvard researchers say they have determined how air passes through the respiratory system of dogs as they run. They say the research may provide a clue to why long-distance runners have great endurance.

University of Utah biologist Dennis Bramble and Harvard's Farish Jenkins Jr. made X-ray movies of dogs trotting on treadmills. Their study published today in the journal Science suggests that dogs, and perhaps other mammals, breathe more efficiently when they run because:

• The stomach and liver slosh around inside the abdomen, acting like an engine piston to help pump the lungs and prevent the main breathing muscle, the diaphragm, from becoming fatigued.

• The seven lobes in a pair of lungs fill at different times, allowing more air to reach tiny lung sacs that transmit oxygen to the bloodstream.

A pair of human lungs has five lobes, two in the left lung and three in the right.

This is apparently the first study in which scientists have made slow-motion X-ray films showing how air moves through the lungs of running mammals, said Bramble.

Bramble said he and Jenkins trained two yellow Labradors, a beagle and a golden retriever to run on treadmills.

During the experiments, conducted at Harvard, each dog was X-rayed as it trotted wearing a mask measuring air flow. The moving image of each dog's lungs, diaphragm and rib cage was projected onto a special screen and recorded by a movie camera.

The researchers discovered dogs breathe in a different way during exercise than during rest, which may be true for humans and other mammals.

"Some of the things we've seen in dogs may be going on in humans," he said. "That would be important to know in terms of how healthy lungs work and what it is about diseased lungs that isn't working properly."

Bramble said his findings may provide a partial explanation of how human marathon runners develop incredible stamina.

"It's a very good study," said David Leith, a physician, respiratory physiologist and professor emeritus at Kansas State University's veterinary medical school.

Man slew woman, girl before suicide, police say

LEWISTON (AP) — Investigators are confident Richard L. Dickinson murdered two women and a teen-age girl before he committed suicide Thursday.

"We're still finalizing our reports, but there's no doubt in anyone's mind what occurred," Lewiston Police Sgt. Paul Ayers said Friday.

Ayers said Dickinson, 30, shot his estranged girlfriend, Julie C. Frost, 25; Frost's friend Cami Lynne Anderson, 25; and baby-sitter Hill Andrews, 14, before turning a gun on himself several hours later.

Frost's 3-year-old and 6-year-old daughters were not harmed.

Lewiston Police Capt. Jack Marshall said Curley's Alibi bar owner, Brian Sprague, told officers Frost and Dickinson were arguing in the bar about 10:45 p.m.

Wednesday, Sprague said he told Dickinson to leave when he saw her strike Frost. That's when Dickinson hit him in the mouth, Sprague said.

"You see some domestic squabbles from time to time in bars and they all look the same," he said.

"With him what was different was the way he stepped back and slapped her so hard and then took a swing at me, which no one has done before."

Frost signed a police complaint against Dickinson that night. She and Anderson apparently had just returned home when they were shot, Ayers said, since their purses were by the front door and they were fully dressed.

The bodies were discovered at Frost's home just before 8 a.m. Thursday by Anderson's sister, All three were shot with a .357-caliber revolver. Frost's body was found in the dining room, Anderson's in the bedroom and Andrews' in the bathroom.

"The bathroom door was forced open, so we presume she was in there when he forced his way in," Ayers said.

Dickinson immediately was identified as a suspect in the slayings and police feared he might harm his ex-wife, Mollie Dickinson, or hold her hostage.

Passengers sue pilot over airplane crash

SPOKANE (AP) — A charter pilot whose plane crashed short of a runway at Helena, Mont., last year is being sued by four passengers.

The lawsuit contends Charles Thomas failed to make sure he had enough fuel in the plane's tanks to land safely the night of Sept. 26, 1992.

The Cessna ran out of fuel and crashed short of the runway, the passengers allege.

The lawsuit, filed Wednesday in Spokane County Superior Court, seeks $1.4 million in damages.

TV needs some thought

Have you noticed how much easier it is to turn a television set "on" than "off"? We have at our house. And like so many others, we've been turning the set on lately to keep up with the latest news. But somehow the television seems to find a way of staying on even after the news report is over, occasionally filling our viewing room — and our children's minds — with video cotton candy that we wouldn't normally tolerate. It's as if the TV is a mind-of-its-own, and our children are only too happy to turn their eyes over to it — until Mom or Dad finally turn the set off.

Joseph Walker
ValueSpeak

Television can cast its spell on all of us, but it seems to hold a special fascination for young people. That's why I've come up with the following 10 TV Commandments for Children at our house. (Yeah, I know — it's awfully presumptuous to call these suggestions "commandments." I guess it's just something I feel strongly about. You and your kids will have to decide whether or not they sound like revelation to you.)

1. Thou shalt have no TV before school. Teachers have enough problems without having to deal with a bunch of kids who have been energized by an early morning injection of "Teen-age Mutant Ninja Turtles." If you get up early and have some extra time on your hands, try — this is going to sound pretty scary — reading. Warm up your brain instead of putting it back to sleep.

2. Thou shalt not make any phone calls to telephone numbers you see on the screen without talking to your mom or dad first — no matter how much you may want those amazing Ginsu knives.

3. Thou shalt not use any of the new words you hear on television until you ask your mom or dad about them, even if they do get a big laugh on the show. Remember, most of the laughter you hear on TV is machine-generated, recorded years ago from people who may be dead by now. And what do dead people know about humor?

4. Remember public television, to watch it wholly — or at least part of the time. Now, I know you think PBS is just for little kids who watch "Sesame Street" and adults who are into boring music. But there are some interesting, informational, and, yes, entertaining things on public TV, too. Make it a goal to watch at least one "good for you" show each week — a "National Geographic" special or "Nova," for example. You'll be surprised at how painless learning something can be.

5. Honor thy father and thy mother. Let them know what you're watching. Trust them when they tell you "no." Talk to them about anything you see or hear on TV that bothers you or makes you feel uncomfortable.

6. Thou shalt not kill time with TV. Nine times out of 10, there are better, more fun and more interesting things to do than to just sit and watch whatever happens to be on TV at the moment. Explore all your options before settling for TV.

7. Thou shalt not commit channel-hopping. You know what I mean — when you flip from station to station looking for something interesting, finally settling for a show that you don't really want to watch but that looks like the best thing on at the time. That is when television is at its mind-numbing, energy-draining, soul-sapping worst.

8. Thou shalt not steal, but thou shalt videotape if your family has a video cassette recorder. Taping shows allows you to make television your own, to watch your master. You can watch what you want to watch, when you want to watch it, and you don't have to be at the mercy of station and network programmers.

9. Thou shalt not bear false witness by saying that "there's never anything good on TV." There are plenty of good things on, but you have to look for them. Sit down with your parents (there I go, bringing them into this again) and a TV program schedule at least once a week and plan your viewing. You'll find more time to watch the shows you really want to watch in addition to getting around to everything else that needs to be done — things like homework, music lessons and hearty outdoor play.

10. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's TV that he has in his own room. Look at it this way: If you're in the mood for a little escapism entertainment, there is no place that television can take him that you can't also go. All you need is a little peace and quiet, a bright light — and a good book.

this principle, and he taught his disciples to do the same.

As he sent them out to tell about his mission, he warned them that they would meet opposition. Some individuals would not want to hear their words and so they should shake the dust from their sandals and go to others who might want to hear them.

I am fearful that our present culture is so affected that we have obscured the great distinction between mere religion and that of genuine Christ-likeness of character.

The world was not always like it is today. God made it beautiful. He even created humans without hatred and lust. Mankind is the same one who has messed up so many things. We have invented conflicting ideologies and religions and are continually asking more questions about what is right and what is wrong.

Is the book called the Bible not relevant anymore? Can we not believe that the Apostle Paul was right when he said, "Jesus Christ was looking for individuals who would make their lives a place where Jesus would feel comfortable living there?"

The bell recently installed in the Twin Falls United Methodist Church makes some of the church's historical past come alive, according to Clarence Dudley.

History rings itself to life

Methodists end 77 years of silence

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The bell is back in business.

After 77 years of silence, the bell tower at the Twin Falls First United Methodist Church is again sending forth its musical messages.

A bell was originally installed in the tower in 1912, three years after the church building on Shoshone was dedicated. The bell had been donated by a man named T. W. Potter, and shipped to Idaho from Northville, Mich.

When a new church addition was constructed in 1916, both the bell and its steeple were removed. The bell eventually disappeared.

Cut to the present: Clarence Dudley, church choir director and acting historian, heard the story of the old bell and decided to try and recreate a little history.

"I talked with one of our pastors (Wayne Weld-Martin) about the fact that a bell had recently been donated to the church," Dudley said. "I thought installing the bell would make some of our historical past come alive, especially since we think we have the oldest church building still standing in Twin Falls."

Bell dedication

The Vernon Smith Bell will be dedicated during a ceremony at the 11 a.m. worship service Oct. 24 at the First United Methodist Church, 360 Shoshone E.

The first peals sounded at 9:40 a.m. on Sept. 8.

The new bell, which is actually about 100 years old, is believed to have once hung in a school in Michigan. It was sent to Glynis Smith 40 years ago by his son-in-law, Wayne Bowen. Smith's son, Vernon Smith, inherited the bell and found its new home.

But that's only half of the story.

Dudley and church custodian Michael Boyd took on the job of installing the 80-pound instrument, now dubbed the Vernon Smith Bell.

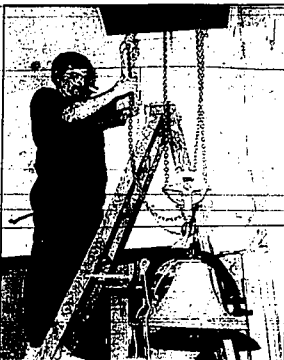

It took nearly a month for Boyd to construct the necessary wooden framework in what is left of the bell tower, an attic-type room measuring 12-foot square. The area is between three and five feet high.

Paper fiber insulation also had to be removed from the tower floor, to keep bell-type sounds from being muffled. That's where the buried treasure was found.

"When we took up the insulation, we found several artifacts," said Dudley, who has arranged the pieces in shadow-box frames.

There are shipping tags from the American Bell & Foundry Company, hardware and rope from the old bell's framework, a carpenter's marking pencil, a bottle of three-in-one oil and a 16-page booklet describing 150 uses for the oil.

Dead Sea Scrolls exhibition surprises New Yorkers

Newsway

NEW YORK — The Israeli official in charge of the Dead Sea Scrolls says he doesn't know why the people at the New York Public Library were so surprised at his offer to lend some of the ancient documents.

Maybe it's because the exhibit, to run through Jan. 8 at the library's main branch, lets the public view scroll fragments that as little as two years ago were available only to a select "cartel" of scholars.

Now, as Gen. Amir Dori, head of the Israel Antiquities Authority, puts it, "Everything is open. Everyone can try to participate, to be a scholar."

The Dead Sea Scrolls exhibit helps visitors play scholar by offering an overview of the scrolls controversies and the period the scrolls were written, about 200 B.C. to 68 A.D. The focus is a well-known group of 12 scroll fragments, including one of the most controversial, the so-called "Pierced Messiah" text.

A shepherd boy found the first scrolls in a cliffside cave overlooking the Dead Sea in 1947, setting off a search that continues today. Almost everything about the scrolls is debated, but scholars believe they were produced by Jews opposed to the religious authorities in charge of the Temple in Jerusalem.

The group gathered in a desert community called Qumran about 15 miles from Jerusalem, is usually believed to be a Jewish sect called the Essenes. But some experts believe they were Sadducees, one of the Jewish sects mentioned in the New Testament. And a few contend that the scrolls were produced by forerunners or even followers of Jesus.

The mainstream view is that the scrolls are a treasure trove of information about Judaism but shed light only indirectly on early Christianity, which has strong roots in Judaism. The scrolls also are valuable because they provide copies of many books of the Hebrew Bible that are 1,000 years older than any previously known — the exhibit includes an ancient text from the Book of Leviticus.

One of the most controversial texts made public in unauthorized versions is part of the library exhibit, a fragment believed to have been copied early in the first century. Dubbed the "Pierced Messiah" text, it prompted debate on whether the scroll authors saw the messiah in much the way Christians do, as one who dies for his people.

Hornets sting Devils

No. 1 Murtaugh falls prey to mishaps, larger Oakley squad

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH — For five minutes after Oakley had put a 10-6 defeat on previously unbeaten and No. 1 ranked Hornet fans raced around Bonner Field assuring each other: "I don't believe it."

Obviously, then, the Hornets didn't take the short downhill run into Murtaugh with much hope of success even though they came in ranked No. 4 in the state and had been as high as No. 2.

And, in fact, it wasn't until a final play from the nine-yard line ended in an incomplete pass that the Oakley fans could finally really not believe it.

Still, the Hornets did everything they had to do to hang on for this one. And Murtaugh did all the things it couldn't do — like fumbling away several possessions.

Murtaugh's hope was quickness, Oakley's was size. Thanks to three turnovers, Oakley had the ball most of the first half, slamming 200-pound Peter Nelson into the middle and eating a lot of clock. In the second half, Murtaugh had a couple more turnovers but Oakley's defense stiffened to stop fourth downs on three occasions.

The game totally hinged on one play and subsequent ruling in the second quarter.

Holding a 6-0 lead, Murtaugh was mired near its own end zone and tried a screen pass to get out. Oakley picked it off and appeared heading for a touchdown. But a collision near the goal line resulted in a fumble, the ball bouncing into the Murtaugh end zone, where a Red Devil fell on it.

Officials ruled the recovery had cost Murtaugh a two-point safety, leaving moot the critical question of "force" xzp Kade Craner. Cranney added the two-pointer on a quarterback sneak.

That was the end of all scoring as Murtaugh had driven 70 yards on its first possession to get a 10-point scoring run from D.J. Stanger.

From the late third quarter on, Murtaugh had Oakley fans holding their breath with three separate threats. But the defense held each time. The Devils missed on fourth and four at the Oakley 22. After a fumble recovery by Sean Hurd, Murtaugh went to fourth and five at the 19 only to see a rollout end in a slip and fall.

Oakley defensive assistant Neal Wyatt explained why Hornet fans held their breath to the last moment.

"When you're playing a back like that No. 2. (Stanger) you're in trouble everytime he carries. His speed makes him a potential long-gainer on every down," Wyatt said.

Oakley Coach Ron Piper praised the total last moment.

Mallett run cements Tigers' win

By Mike Maller
Times-News sports editor

JEROME — Ryan Mallett's 70-yard touchdown run 32 seconds before halftime shattered any serious comeback thoughts by Wood River and closed the scoring in a 28-7 victory by Jerome in District 4 Class A-2 football Friday night.

The run came on the first play after the Tigers stopped a Wood River on-downs at the Jerome 30-yard line. It sealed the third-ranked Tigers' fourth victory in six outings. The Wolverines dropped to 2-4.

"We were going to run a running play and see what they were using so we could come back with a pass," said Jerome Coach Stan Richter. "But Ryan Mallett once again, behind that line, turned it into a touchdown and made our job easy."

Mallett's second TD of the first half ran his yardage total to 142. He didn't carry after intermission.

The Tigers substituted liberally in the second half and still held onto their margin.

"We got a lot of young kids in," Richter said. "We got a look at a lot of people."

With the Jerome offensive line opening gaping holes, Mallett, Kevin Capps and quarterback Aaron Bay racked up more than 200 yards rushing in the first two periods.

The Tigers' first two possessions lasted four plays each, totaled 72 yards and resulted in Capps scoring runs for a 13-0 lead.

"That's been our trademark the last three games, to get the ball and move it down the field the first quarter," Richter said. "I thought the line did a real good job establishing dominance the first part of the game."

Wood River bounced back with an 86-yard drive to start the second quarter. Bryan Burrell passes to Trent Rushion and Josh Berens along with a 23-yard run by Hoss Schmidt led to a 32-yard touchdown throw from Burrell to Berens.

"Give Wood River a lot of credit,"

Trail Blazers work out on Boise State court

BOISE — The Portland Trail Blazers will hold their annual preseason training camp at the Boise State Pavilion through Wednesday.

The camp is closed to the public except for the 6:30-8:30 p.m. practice Monday. That workout will be open to the public at no charge. The Pavilion doors will open at 5:30 p.m.

Jazz send 1st-round player to doctor after 'flutter'

ST. GEORGE, Utah — Utah Jazz coach Jerry Sloan indicated Friday that it was not known if first-round draft pick Luther Wright would participate in the team's regular training camp here.

Wright experienced possible heart irregularities earlier this week and was sent to the team doctor. Sloan said he had not received any test results.

"In tests like this, basketball is not the concern at this point. We don't want to put any pressure on him," Sloan said. "When he gets here, he'll get here."

Sloan said earlier that Wright, 22, was at home on the couch when he first felt his heart "flutter" Wednesday afternoon.

Shaq still hopes Pepsi won't fizzle Dream Team II chance

ORLANDO, Fla. — The Orlando Magic's Shaquille O'Neal will not be among the 10 players on the USA Basketball

World Championship team — the Dream Team II — that will be named Saturday.

Although O'Neal would be the team's marquee attraction, he was excluded because of an exclusivity clause in his contract with Pepsi, one of the products he endorses.

To be eligible for the team, players have to sign an agreement that will allow the team's sponsors — two of which are McDonald's and Coca-Cola — to use their likenesses in promotions.

O'Neal's Pepsi contract, which is worth an estimated $10 million, does not permit him to sign that agreement.

"I still want to play," O'Neal said Thursday during the team's media day at Orlando Arena.

Chisox spoil Jays' return home with 6-1 win

The Associated Press

TORONTO — Once the Chicago White Sox scored five runs in the third inning, Wilton Alvarez knew it was lights out for the Toronto Blue Jays.

"I had good stuff in the bullpen and when we scored all those runs, I knew the game was over," said Alvarez, a 23-year-old left-hander who won his final seven regular-season starts after a trip to the minors in August to work on his control.

He had it all Friday night in stopping the Blue Jays 6-1 and cutting their lead to 2-1 in the American League playoffs.

Alvarez said he avoided any added pressure by looking at this game as "just another regular season game. I had to challenge the hitters."

Alvarez had some trouble in the early innings, with the Blue Jays collecting six of their seven hits — two each in the second, third and fourth.

"In the first few innings, I wasn't nervous but I tried to overthrow the ball," he said. "When they didn't score with the bases loaded, I relaxed and started to throw the ball over."

Alvarez allowed only one hit over the last five innings.

Manager Gene Lamont said he asked Alvarez before the game if he was nervous.

"He said he wasn't," the manager said. "It's a lot easier to not be nervous when you have good stuff."

Alvarez got the big outs in the second when Tony Fernandez hit into a double play. He got out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the fourth by striking out Fernandez and getting Ed Sprague to fly out. Then it was smooth sailing.

Rivalry weekend

Long-time foes Michigan, Florida, Texas square off;
No. 19 BYU heads to California against No. 25 UCLA

The Associated Press

Two college football's fiercest rivalries resume Saturday and neither of them is No. 1 Florida State against No. 3 Miami.

Oh, sure, the Seminoles and Hurricanes, who play at Tallahassee, have staged a couple of memorable battles the past two years and they've been blocked and tackled each other since 1951. That's kid stuff, though, compared to Michigan vs. Michigan State and Texas vs. Oklahoma.

The Wolverines and Spartans first played in 1926, and that was more than a quarter century after the Longhorns and Sooners had their first meeting in 1898. They'll both be at it again Saturday, with

No. 9 Michigan at East Lansing and No. 10 Oklahoma against Texas at Dallas.

In other games involving ranked teams, it will be No. 4 Notre Dame vs. Pittsburgh, No. 5 Florida at Louisiana State, No. 6 Ohio State at Illinois, No. 11 Tennessee at Arkansas, No. 13 Washington at No. 16 California, No. 14 Texas A&M vs. Houston, No. 15 North Carolina vs. Wake Forest, No. 17 Louisville at No. 24 West Virginia, No. 19 Brigham Young at No. 25 UCLA, No. 20 Colorado vs. Missouri, No. 21 Wisconsin vs. Northwestern, and No. 22 Auburn vs. Mississippi State.

The college football weekend began Thursday night, when No. 7 Nebraska defeated Oklahoma State 27-13 in the 200th victory of coach Tom Osborne's career.

As important as a simple win or loss in the record, the Michigan-Michigan State and Texas-Oklahoma confrontations are vital to recruiting. In each case, the schools often pursue the same blue chip players.

Running back Tyrone Wheatley, third on Michigan's all-time touchdown list with 35, says the Wolverines coaches use psychological weapons on their players when they're preparing for the Spartans.

"The week we play Michigan State is always different," Wheatley said. "Our coaches walk around and joke with us. They'll say, 'Michigan State didn't want you. That's why you're here.'"

It's a cinch the Spartans would have welcomed Wheatley, though. The junior

Braves' power bats come alive against Philly

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Maybe we've been talking about the wrong Fab Four on the Atlanta Braves.

Sure, they've got the best starting rotation in the majors, but the big boppers in the middle of the Braves' batting order aren't too shabby, either.

"It is a very explosive lineup," Atlanta manager Bobby Cox said after the Braves evened the NL playoffs with a 14-3 rout of the Philadelphia Phillies on Thursday night.

"It's hard to hold our club down very long."

Ask Tommy Greene how explosive the Braves can be. He took his perfect 10-0 record at Veterans Stadium to the mound, and Fred McGriff's bat went BA-BOOM!

Bulls look to Pippen for help

DEERFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Michael Jordan is out, Toni Kukoc is in, and the Chicago Bulls said Friday they know they have a big challenge ahead of them.

Two questions loomed large as the three-time NBA champions opened training camp: How will the Bulls play without the retired Jordan? And who, if anyone, will step into his leadership role?

The obvious candidate to be the team's new leader is All-Star forward Scottie Pippen, whose considerable skills have long been overshadowed by Jordan. Coach Phil Jackson left little doubt about what he wants from Pippen this season. "I just patted him on the back and told him that's where the saddle is going to land," Jackson said. "It's going to be a test by fire for him. He's perfectly capable of stepping in."

Pippen said he doesn't feel any additional pressure, but for the first time, all the cameras and microphones pointed at him as he stepped into the room. "It's a great role," he said. "We're going to find out what we've got as a team."

The Bulls were built around Jordan's talent at both ends of the court. "He's gone, and that changes everything," Jackson said. In past years, he had asked several players to be less creative and to take supporting roles, especially point guard B.J. Armstrong and forward Horace Grant.

"It's going to be fun for them to not be the Jordanaires," Jackson said. The wild card is Kukoc, who has played professionally in Europe and was widely regarded as the best player outside the NBA. But nobody knows how good that makes him.

"I think he's going to fit in," Will Perdue said. "But I don't know how good a player he is. Unfortunately, he has been hyped a lot by Jerry Krause."

Krause, the Bulls' vice president for basketball operations, made Kukoc the team's second-round pick in the 1990 draft, and finally signed him this year. Krause's public courtship of Kukoc at times annoyed some of the Bulls, most notably Jordan and Pippen.

But Friday, the team seemed eager to see what the 6-foot-11 guard-forward could contribute, and Kukoc, a superstar overseas, played the part of the humble rookie. "I can only do my best," he said. "I've been working hard all summer, lifting weights four and five hours a day."

Investigation clears Jordan of violations

NEW YORK (AP) — The NBA's investigation into Michael Jordan's gambling activities has been completed, and commissioner David Stern said Friday there was "absolutely no evidence Jordan violated league rules." Stern previously said there was "absolutely no connection" between the investigation, conducted by former federal judge Frederick Lacey, and Jordan's sudden retirement from the Chicago Bulls on Wednesday. "The Lacey investigation is officially closed," Stern said in a statement released by NBA spokesman Jan Hubbard. "Michael and I have agreed to meet to discuss Michael's off-court activity and that meeting will still be held sometime in the future."

Jordan and Stern had decided earlier that a meeting would be appropriate and decided to keep that date despite the star's retirement. The commissioner attended Jordan's farewell press conference a day after Jordan informed Stern that he was leaving the NBA.

Lacey was hired by the commissioner in June to look into Jordan's off-court activities after the release of a book by San Diego businessman Richard Esquilnas, who claimed Jordan lost $1.25 million to him in golf bets and that they had negotiated a $300,000 settlement.

THEISEN MOTORS

NOT ONE RED CENT OUT OF YOUR POCKET!

THE POWER OF TRUST

You can't buy trust, you have to earn it. That's what Theisen Motors has been doing for 40 years: earning the trust and confidence of the people of Idaho with a total dedication to complete, long-term satisfaction. It's paid off. People trust Theisen Motors for the right selection, the right price and service 6 days a week. That's how Theisen Motors remains #1 year after year. The Theisen Plan is one reason why over 80% of Theisen Motors customers are repeat customers...or referred by someone who has done business with Theisen Motors.
